Khomeini's announcement Monday came on the eve of the birthday of the Imam Mehdi, an ancient Shiite Muslim leader whose birthday is celebrated across the nation.

Khomeini said he was advising the remnants of the past regime who "are still opposing the will of the nation" to give up "their useless efforts" and join the unified ranks of the nation.

"I have always said that we must uild an Iran which is independent of both East and West and is capable of standing on its feet," he said. # Oil find to boost Saudi reserves

By John Close and James Buchan

JEDDAH, July 9 — A major upward revision in Saudi crude oil reserves is expected in the light of a sizable new oil find made this

The find was announced last week by Petroleum and Mineral Resnurces Minister Sbeikh Ahmad Zaki Yamani in an interview with "Newsweek" magazine. He described it as a "very exciting and very big new find."

Dr. Abdul Hadi Taher, governor of Petromin, called it a "sizable find" in the northern Empty Quarter. The find is located in a small section of desert termed "Retained Area" by Aramco and is apparently the first major find in the area. The bulk of Sandi Arabia's known reserves are in the much larger Retained Area 1, which includes the Abqaiq, Berri, Ghawar and Safaniyah fields.

Earlier, sources in an Aramco shareholding company had told the "Financial Times" in London that the field had already been named

Dr. Taher hesitated to estimate the size of the field because exploratory drilling work is still going on. "We have not yet con-firmed the size but we are very excited.

Dr. Taher did say, however, the find was "definitely under 700,000 barrels a day."

The new find is over and above added capacity from three new fields in Retained Area 1 mentioned in Aramco's annual report at 1978. These were the oashore fields of Jaladi and Wariah and an offshore field called Harqus between the Berri and Marjan fields.

These apparently added capacity of around 3.1 billion barrels a large discovery by international standards but only slightly over one year's Saudi production at Selli icacis ol sto lion barrels a day.

Aramco, which has regularly discovered more oil than it has lifted, last year raised the level of probable reserves by 200 million barrels to 177.8 billion barrels, Production in 1978 totalled 2.9 billion barrels.

Israel, Egypt sign first trade accord

TEL AVIV, July 9 (R) — Israel's biggest industrial concern Koor has signed an agreement with an Egyptian firm nn mutual trade following the peace treaty between the two countries, a Koor official said Monday.

Benny Gaon, head of the European division of Koortrade, the marketing arm of the Koor Industrial Organization, said he signed the agreement last week during a visit to Cairo at the invitation of the Egyptian firm, which he would not identify.

Gaon said his Egyptian hosts were mostly interested in buying agricultural equipment such as irrigation systems, construction material and medicines.

First shipments could leave Israel for Egypt within a month. he said, but stressed that exports would have to go through European ports during the initial stages of trade relations between the two former adversaries.

Gaon said that the toughest problem facing Israeli exporters wishing to sell goods to Egypt was the high cost of Israeli production.

RIYADH, July 9— A ministerial committee formed on the orders of King Khaled and Crown Prine Fabd to study government contracts with foreign companies has held a series of prolonged meetings to examine the relationship between foreign firms and their Saudi representatives and sponsors, and the effects of higher prices on _development projects

Both the King and the Crown Prince had shown particular interest in the subjects.

According to "Al-Riyadh" Monday, projects under the Third Five-Year Plan, which will come into effect in 1980, will be given in preference to Saudi contractors. Large projects will be broken up to enable smaller Saudi firms to participate. That already frequently happens; at Yanbu and Jubail, for example, where the Royal Commission has broken up several major jobs to award them to Saudi firms. Saudi companies are already given preference in contract awards.

The committee, though, has established a technical board to evaluate contracts and to determine exactly how Saudi firms might be given the chance of participating in major works.

Power Co. and the General Electricity Organization Saturday signed a memorandum under which Taipower will send 240 technicians to the Kingdom to help operate and maintain a power plant and its transmission system in the Baha district, the China News Agency reported Monday.

L. K. Chen, chairman of Taipower, and Mahmoud. Taybah, governor of the General Electricity Organization, signed the memorandum. A formal pact is expected to be signed in Saudi Arabia shortly.

The thermal power plant built by Taipower is part of a $ 752 million rural electrification project. It has an installed capacity of 60,000 kilowatts, covering a service area of 1,000 square kilometers.

Construction began in October 1977. Up to now two generating units each with a capacity of 5,000 kilowatts have become operational. Another five units, each with a capacity of 10,000 kilowatts, are expected to be completed at the end of this year, four months ahead of schedule.

The 240 technicians will work in the Baha district under a two-year contract. At the signing ceremony, Taybah expressed his hope that Taipower and his organization would continue to cooperate in the Saudi power development. He said the Saudi authorities were satisfied with Taipower's performance in helping the Kingdom build the plant.

Aegean disputes to be studied by Greece, Turkey

ATHENS, July 9 (Agencies) ---Greek and Turkish officials Monday began their fourth round of talks on the Aegean Sea, air space and related disputes.

The disputes prevent Greece's re-entry into the military wing of NATO from which it withdrew in August 1974 when Turkey invaded Cyprus, Greece is now seeking a special status under which its armed forces will come under NATO command only in a major East-West conflict.

Turkey is blocking the move, arguing that Aegean issues should be settled before Greece returns to NATO's military wing.

Progress is unlikely at the talks. The two delegations are expected to prepare a second summit between the two prime ministers.

The main items on the agenda are the countries' Aegean continental shelf and air space differ-

RAMALLAH, West Bank, July 9 (R) — Palestinian mayors on the West Bank have said they will halt municipal services if the Israeli military authorities continue to ban the transfer of aid funds from Jordan.

Karim Khalaf, the mayor of Ramallah, Sunday said that if the military governor continued to forbid the transfer of development aid for a number of towns, he and other mayors would stop providing services for their people.

TEHRAN, July 9 (AP) — Iran Arabia, which is the largest expor- Mosque; will end its contributions to educational and other organizations in foreign countries because "a great portion of the Iranian people are suffering from poverty and hunger," the official Pars News Agency said Sunday.

The agency, quoting an informant at the Ministry of Economic and Financial Affairs, said the Shah committed $548 million for such purposes "in order to gain personal prestige." It said the money not yet paid so far, which amounts to $353 million, would be kept in Iran.

Iran is also to reconsider its commitment of $420 million to a special OPEC fund. "Sandi

OAU meeting snarled by rival Chad groups

MONROVIA, Liberia, July 9 "All sorts of vicious tricks bave (R) — The foreign minister of been played on us," Dering said. Chad has alleged that Libya and Liberia had tried to prevent his delegation from taking part in the current conference of the Organization of African Unity (OAU).

Captain Couma-Ba Dering, head of the delegation from Chad said Sunday its nine members had been told to leave their hotel and had their passports taken away.

Dering said the harrassment was one of several moves taken in an attempt to have his delegation declared illegal and said the Libyan, Nigerian and Liberian delegations were leading the campaign.

The question of who should represent Chad, where thousands of people have been killed in tribal and religious fighting this year, flared into a fierce debate shortly after the annual OAU ministerial conference opened Friday.

Two Chad delegations have arrived in Monrovia for the meeting. Dering's group represents the gnvernment of President Mahamat Chanua hut its right to attend the conference is contested hy the seennd, representing Chad's pro-Libyan faction.

"Liberian Foreign Minister Cecil Dennis came to see me to demand that I hand over my accreditation and told me that it would be wiser for me to leave Liberia I told him I would not."

Although negotiations were going on Sunday in an attempt to resolve the deadlock, the issue has stopped all work of the 10-day conference which is to prepare for an OAU summit in 10 days.

The hitter debate here reflects the fighting that broke out in Chad earlier this year between Muslim tribesmen in the north of the country and Christians in the south. The government formed by Chaoua last April contains five of the nine factions struggling for a share of power. The Nigerian and Libyan gov-emments, each of which backs factions not contained in the Chaoua administration, are said to be npposing the recognition of Dering's delegation here. But a majority of the French-speaking countries here believe that Dering; should be allowed to represent Chad.

SALT campaign enters Senate panel

WASHINGTON, July 9 (R)— The Carter administration Monday begins a crucial battle for Senate approval of the new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT II) signed by President Carter and President Brezhnev in Vienna on June 18.

A long, probably bitter cam-paign starts with a month of hearings by the Scnate Foreign Relations Committee and will end with a Senate vote, perhaps in November. A two-thirds majority is needed to ratify the treaty which outs curbs on major weapons in the nuclear arsenals of the two Senate majority leader Robert Byrd said Sunday the treaty would not get the majority if a vote were taken today. It might by November but this was by no means certain:

The Soviet Union has said it will accept no changes to SALT II and the Carter administration will fight to resist efforts to rewrite some of its key provisions.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Secretary of Defense Harold Brown will be the first witnesses

But he would not say if the Soviet Union would agree to any such alterations to the treaty, which faces a tough passage through the Senate. Byrd said the Senate could add Asked what amendments the Soviets might accept, Senator Byrd replied, "I can't presume to speak for the Soviet leaders."

Senator Byrd, who said he has not made up his mind how to vote on the treaty, said he was concerned about the status of the Soviet backfire bomber and felt the Senate should make it clear that the backfire was not to be used as an :: intercontinental. bomber.

M.E. STALEMATE

Robert Strauss has gone back to Washington, and by now has briefed his embattled boss President Carter on the state of play in the Middle East. The trip to four countries was no doubt useful in terms of getting Strauss acquainted with the leaders of the area, but we cannot see how he can report back a status of anything but stalemate.

As far as the Israelis are concerned, stalemate is fine. There is no compulsion with any teeth in it for them to change their plans oo creating 'bantustans' out of the West Bank and Gaza, and theo annexing the territories outright at the end of their "five year" review.

Egypt is in the hapless position that the rest of the Arab world warned about in the first Baghdad summit last November. Whatever the sincerity of Egypt's desire for a Palestinian homeland, there is oothing it can do now besides unraveiling the recent treaty with Israel. The monkey in this process is now on the back of President Carter. To break the stalemate will again require strong American intervention in the characle of talks taking place between Egypt and Israel. With only one-fifth of the American people coovinced that he is doing a good job, Mr. Carter looks a political cripple. And until he regains some strength, or decides oot to run for reelection at all, he cannot be expected to order Strauss to take the only step available for breaking the stalemate - recognition, and a dialogue with, the PLO. Mr. Strauss says the chances of U.S. recognition are "between slim and zero — for the moment." Should Mr. Carter win a primary election or two next spring, presumably the chances would go up. But to what? One in ten?

The chances of peace or war in the Middle East have reached a sorrowful crossroads if the way forward is contingeot on the good political health of a U.S. president. The slide to war has more momentum and weight behind it at present, and it is in the immediate as well as long term interests of the United States to stop that.

Mr. Carter's current lameness affects, in truth, only his political fortunes in 1980. If he is prepared to bring the PLO into the Middle East search for peace, he has the office and the authority to do so now. Another war in the area would only wreck the courage he has shown so far, and perhaps would prove an insurmountable political liability for the future.

Trees fell, but did the press hear them?

WASHINGTON -

Generations of philosophers have puzzled over the question, "If a tree falls in the forest and no one hears it, does it make a noise?". One might also ask, "If a tree falls in the forest and the press is on hand but does not report it, does it make a noise?". The answer to the first question leaves room for difference of opinion; the answer to the second is, sadly, "No."

Consider the following situation going on right now: the nation is gripped by a gasoline and diesel fuel shortage. Oil companies report that supplies are about 4/5 of the same time last year. Getting gasoline has become a major event in the lives of millions of automobile drivers, and frustrations have sparked violence. The majority of the nation's independent truckers are on strike because of short supplies and the high price of diesel fuel. Crops are being plowed under because there aren't trucks to carry the produce to market. Later on in the summer there may not be adequate fuel to run the tractors, anyway. And winter isn't all that far in the future. The "Washingtoo Post" and other metropolitan dailies carry page after page of stories about the gas lines. "Time" magazine devotes a cover story to the problem.

Against this Hill-watchers learn that a bill working its way through Congress contains language that will permit Alaskan crude oil to be shipped to a foreign state in support of a presidential pledge to meet that nation's oil supplies for fifteen years if it has difficulty obtaining its own. The bill is written in such a way that the favored foreign state is the only one in the world that will be eligible for supplies of American crude oil although the name of the state appears oowhere in the bill. Most congressional offices say that they are unaware of the bill's special provision.

Several groups and individuals opposed to the idea of American crude oil being shipped to a foreign state at a time wheo America faces an energy crisis go into action in the belief that an aroused public will tell Congress that no oil may be exported as long as American needs are not being met. A key to this campaign is the press. One organization circulates a background paper widely among the press and on the Hill. Major news outlets are contacted in person. Volunteers pass out leaflets to people waiting in gas lines, urging them to write their Senators and Congressmeo. A well-publicized press conference is held at an Exxon station in Georgetown to provide a "media-genic" event.

What happens? Nothing, if "oothing" may be defined as reporting on the story by any major American newspaper or magazine. Checks are made with reporters and editors to be sure that they received the information about the legislation. Each is asked, "Isn't this a significant story?", "Isn't there likely to be a voter backlash if Congress passes this bill and oil actually does get shipped out of the country when we can't meet our own needs?". "Won't the producing countries be reluctant to raise output levels at our urging if we are exporting American crude at the same time?." The answer to each of these questions is "Yes," but the press blackout continues.

It is disturbing to consider that if the foreign country in question had been any other than Israel, there would oever have been such a bill and such a Presidential promise in the first place. But what of the press? Is the press reluctant to tackle a story that would generate criticism because it appeared to "pick on" Israel?

Far from being inconsequential, the story touches economists, ecologists, Middle East policy makers, and everyone who drives a car or goes to a grocery store. The press blackout is troubling because it interposes editorial decision between the facts and the people's need to know the facts in order to take responsible decisions. — (WP)

SAHEL, Eritrea, -"Come now," said the guerrilla fighter of the Eritrean People's Liberation Froot (EPLF) at 5 a.m. one morning.

I crawled out of my sleeping bag on to the bard dirt floor of the stone bunker, splashed a handful of water in my face and walked outside.

Some 500 young boys and girls had already begun their military exercises in the broad sandy river bed, marching up and down in three tight formations, Another 1,500 or more guerrilla trainces mirrored these warm-up activities in nearby valleys and canyons.

mand, made a half turn and lunged forward with their rifles in a simulated bayonet charge, taut grimaces on their soft, young faces.

Back to attention. Again forward and down, as if gutting an enemy soldier. They range in age from 15 to 18. They are called the Vanguards. They are learning to be guerrilla fighters in order to join Eritrea's 18-year war for independence from Ethiopia

Many come from the larger towns in this Red Sea territory, towns held last year by the guerrillas and now by the Ethiopian military Government.

Rhodesia: Does the new constitution really change things?

By Caryle Marphy SALISBURY -

In the cootroversy about whether to lift economic sanctions against the new biracial government here, a key question is the fairness of the constitution that was approved by white voters in January.

Critics say that the constitution does nothing to change the racial situation here, where for nine decades a small white population ruled the native black majority. They charge that the document effectively guarantees white control of the government for years to come.

Backers of the new government counter that the constitution represents the most that blacks could possibly hope for at this point and that true majority rule "is bere," in the words of newly-elected black Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa.

Most cootroversial are provisions of the coostitution under which whites are reserved 28 seats in the 100-member assembly and one-third of the secate seats, despite representing only 4 per cent of the

In addition, whites retain cootrol of the top military and police posts and high court judgeships. The civil service also remains under white control, and entrance requirements make it difficult for most blacks to qualify for government jobs. Any changes in the bureaucratic structure, including the replacement of present government jobs. Any changes in the bureauratic structure, including the replacement of present government functionaries, must be approved by the white Civil Service Com-

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance cited such sections of the constitution to explain President Jimmy Carter's decision not to lift sanctions against the former British colony.

This constitution emasculates the man running the country," said one constitutional analyst. "No conduct of the war.

self-respecting black leader would accept it Yet another analyst, a black, argued that "this constitution has finished the monopolistic power of the Rhodesian Front," the party of former Prime Minister Ian Smith. "There is a hole in the dam. We don't know how big it is, some whites will try to plug it and the blacks will try to enlarge it, but the fact of the matter is that there's a hole in the dam."

Nevertheless, the white minority here holds what amounts to a veto over fundamental changes in the government. Their leaders argue that cootinued white participation in the government is essential to

Central to the constitution are provisions guaranteeing white cootrol of the military, which is waging an escalating war against an estimated 12,000 nationalist guerrillas inside the country and many more being trained in camps in nearby nations.

The principal architect of the constitution, Solicitor General George Smith, has reacted sharply to charges that the new biracial government serves as a "puppet" for the white minority. Those charges, be declared," indicate a complete bias and are deliberate distortions of our constitution."

Referring to criticism that the white third of parliament can block changes desired by the black majority, he said "Government is run by the passing of legislation. Over 300 laws of the country can be emended by a simple majority of the parliament." Under the constitution, Muzorewa also holds the title of minister of defense and combined operations, heading the agency that directs the war against Patriotic Front guerrillas.

According to the letter of the constitution, combined operations chief Lt. Gen. Peter Walls and army commander Alexander MacLean "shall comply' with directions they get from Muzorewa on the

In the bypothetical situation of a disagreemen between Walls and Muzorewa or the refusal of Walls to comply with a decision by the prime minister, Muzorewa can constitutionally abolish Walls' job, which exists only at the prime minister's discretioo. MacLean's job cannot be ended by the prime Muzorewa, however, cannot dismiss Walls or reduce his rank arbitrarily. For that, he needs the approval of the Defense Forces Commission. Its membership is restricted to whites for the time being because of the requirement that members have held a rank above colonel for at least five years. The highest rank now beld by a black is

In practice, political realities would also enter into the resolution of any potential conflict between Muzorewa and his white defense chiefs. In the case of a serious disagreement, "Walls would have to decide whether to resign or stage a coup," said one political analyst.

"In political terms, whites are constrained because if they stage a coup they have so much to lose. If the world doesn't give recognition to Muzorewa, do you think they will give it to whites after a coup?" he asked.

Likewise, Muzorewa would have to consider the effect oo white morale of an open clash with Walls. It is a basic political fact that the white-led armed forces are keeping 12,000 guerrillas from toppling his new government.

"In practice, Muzorewa is dependent for his survival on three things - an efficient defense force, an efficient administrative force and white morale, so there's no way he can argue against a decision of the military," one constitutional analyst observed. Others have noted that the prime minister has no (WP) way of double-checking on the intelligence Walls and MacLean choose to present him as military decision.

The face is that where the war is concerned, Muzorewa's interests and those of the whites coincide, which he made clear in an interview shortly after be took office.

"If Walls came here to say he was going to send some people to hunt everybody in Mozambique, I would say 'no' and I know he would not do it. Bot if Walls came and said we have got five or whatever oumber of armed (meo) and intelligence says on a certain day they are knocking us over, why would I say don't go and preempt that situation? Why on earth would I say that?" Muzorewa told his inter-Vicwer.

Blacks participating in the new government rec-ognize the need to amend the constitution, although they are not prepared to say so on the record. Any amendments, however, require the votes of at least six whites out of the 28 in the national assembly. It is unlikely those votes could be mustered unless whites saw it in their best political interest. The refusal of the outside world to recognize the present government and lift sanctions no doubt increases the chances the whites may eventually see the need

At present, however, white officials scoff at the notion that altering the constitution would budge the west to recognize the new government. "The west would not be satisfied (with changes)," said Smith. "Changing it is not going to bring (guerrilla leaders Joshua) Nkomo and (Robert) Mugabe back...Can you expect the (guerrilla leaders) who have been fighting for control of this country for so long to come back and accept the position of an opposition or backbencher?" -

saudi press review

Saudi newspapers Monday led with the meeting between Crown Prince Fahd and American special envoy Robert Strauss which reiterated the Kingdom's declared policy in the Middle East. Other topics covered included the meeting in Vienna between PLO chief Yasser Arafat and the Socialist International leaders, Kreisky and Brandt, and the fire raging in the Iranian oil-rich province of Khuzes-

Commenting on Saudi-American talks Al-Medina said they were useful for both sides. 'They enable the Saudis to project their point of view and point the way to a serious attempt to solve the problem and help the Americans get the other side of the issues involved more objectively than they would have done if they depended on the Israeli view alone.

"The United States could help a great deal by taking an objective and just view of the problem, especially with regard to the Palesmian people. But the U.S. must analyze the situation without being unduly influenced by Israel, which has occupied our lands and rendered our people homeless.

"We consider the Americans a friendly people and, on that basis, we told them the truth and our sincere desire for a just peace based on justice. It is up to them to act now.

In another commentary Al-Medina said the decision to raise the production of oil in the country would be of great service to mankind at this time. "Because of excessive use of oil and subsequently the exorbitant prices that some industrialized states were paying for it in the spot markets, many of the smaller states suffered while big oil companies went on

"At present those involved in the self-government negotiations claim to be dealing with the core of the problem but they started off on the wrong foot, which means that they will soon reach a dead end despite all the propaganda surrounding the talks. Fahd gave Strauss a clear and precise view of the right way to go about it without which there can be no real peace in the region."

Al-Bilad commented on the signing of a trade agreement between the United States and Communist China by saying that it shows "there are no permanent friends or permanent enemies," as Winston Churchill had put it.

"The agreement earns greater importance for its political implications in the game of oations between the U.S. and the Soviet Union. Although the Chinese demanded that certain conditions be fulfilled by the U.S., the latter cooceded them for mutual interest. The Chinese needed Western technology and the U.S. obviously found Chinese friendship useful in its balance of power with the Soviet Uoion. Besides, the Chinese market would, in the long run, be of particular interest to the U.S. which, cooceivably, may later on manufacture its expensive products in China in order to lower their cost of production, because of lower wages in that thickly populated country."

Both Okaz and Al-Jazirah also commented on the outcome of the meeting between Prince Fahd and Strauss and reaffirmed the Kingdom's stand with regard to the Middle east problem.

Okaz said that "the basic solution must involve undoing the crime committed against the Palestinian people."

Al-Jazirah said that "Sandi diplomacy is practiced calmly without noise and propaganda, free from guile and deceit. It is wellconsidered and takes into account all the dangers and traps put on its way by enemies of the Arab peo-

East and Asia, In Far Arabia, he examines the extraordinary fascination the Arabian Peninsula has held for many generations of Europeans, especially for those from the Anglo-Saxon north. The legend which successive waves of travelers, writers and poets have woven, Brent suggests, now forms as essential part of the artistic and cultural traditions of Europe. The travelers themselves have been status of romantic heroes and the lands and peoples they describe have become part of mythology.

A moment's reflection on the space occupied in our collective imagination by longer, more incredible and barsher travels and voyages In Africa, Australasia, the Polar regions, the Americas and on the cruel seas would confirm that Brent has a case.

The magic ingredient, of course is the presence in the Arabian landscape, of the wily, fanatical, loyal, simple, lovable, hospitable, hardy, untrustworthy, courteous, avaracious, courageous, indolent, incomprehensible, contradictory Bedouin.

Anyone who has attentively read the whole of the literature from the 16th-century to the present day, or even the greater part of it, which is in English, will admit, if he is honest, to an ineluctible schizophrenia of love and hate in

'Arabia', quoted by Brent.)

The book opens with a brief description of the terrain and of the momentous events associated with the rise of Islam, the establishment of the Arab empire and its dissolution in the wake of civil war and Mongol terror. Brent points out that it was the Holy Cities of Islam, forbidden and mysterious which, more than the people and the landscape, first attracted the traveler. The credit of being the first European "to penetrate the veils of myth and terror" was won by Ludovico di Varthema, an Italian, who arrived on the scene in 1503. His reports are full of detail and keen observation.

Another of the early travelers was Joseph Pitts, a captured English sailor become slave, who was brought to Mocka by his master in about 1679. He too, wrote a spirited account of his adventures, after his release, which captured the imagination of generations of his countrymen.

The first to devote attention to the Bedouin was Loois D'Arvieux, an emissary of the King of France, who came in 1660 to carry out a mission into Sinai. As Brent records, he wrote — the first time for a European readership — detailed descriptions of the life and culture of the desert

D'Arvieux proposed that the attitudes of the Bedouin had been formed as much by their recorded descent from Ishmael as by the harshness of their environment. He too, was as perplexed as those who followed him, by the para-

The following section of Brent's book deals with "the sons of the enlightenment," as he calls the scholars and scientists who next appeared on the Arabian scene.

> An impressive party of five specialists, of whom Carsten Niebuhr, the only survivor, was to become the most famous, set out in 1761, under the patronage of the King of Denmark, to explore Arabia, particularly the Yemen.

"Ali Bey" (Domingo Badia), who followed in 1806, was the first European to "take on the clothes, the language, the appearance and the character of an Arab". A portrait of him, one of the several excellent illustrations in the book, Others were to attempt a similar masquerade, though few really pulled it off.

(It is very doubtful, for instance, that Lawrence's imperfect Arabic and flamboyant Sherifian dress would have deceived anyone for a moment. Burton, though, was only discovered — and then by his Arab servant of many months because of a minor slip he made at the very last moment before his ship sailed).

One of the most brilliant of all the Arabian travelers was John Lewis Burckhardt, an Anglo-Swiss, whose early explorations were in Africa. Taking the name Ibrahim, he was, even among the Ulema, a notable authority on Arabic literature and Koranic interpretation. It was he who rediscovered the rose red city of Petra. In Jeddah, in 1814, he made a systematic study of the community and its trade. He travelled up to Taif and then to Mecca, where he stayed for several months. His detailed accounts of the Holy City and the ways of life of its citizens and pilgrims were not substantially improved

"The Mekkawys," he noted, "are cleaner in their dress than any other eastern people I have seen." In 1829 he published "Travels in Arabia," followed in 1830 by "Notes on the Bedouins and the Wahabys." The latter is still an authoritative work on a complicated subject. Meaowhile, the romaotic movement in Europe was gather-ing momentum and the Arabia of the Arabian Nights emerged: "a place of moonlight and minarets, of white sands and sighing maidens, of gleaming palaces that vanished at a single word." Here Brent is at his most witty in a book whose style delights and which frequently produces smiles and soft chuckles. The poet Moore wrote an Oriental Romance "Lalla Rookh," in which this image of Arabia appears:

"The young Arab, haunted by

To which Brent adds: "It is clear that Moore had smelled neither camel, well nor tent; it is not the smell of flowers that would have conjured these up."

Patriot Adventurers is Brent's name for the next group of explorers, of whom, perhaps, Sir Richard Burton was the most "beroic" and, almost certainly, the greatest linguist. His journey to Mecca and Medina was meticulously described and, like his numerous other works, of extraordinary anthropological interest. His translation of "A Thousand and One Nights' with its various appendices, was a masterpiece.

But it was C.M. Doughty who, in 1876, began the journey which, according to Brent, "was to result in the one indisputable classic which Arabian exploration has added to the canon of travel literature, if one excludes Arab writers." Writteo in an archaic bot beaotiful style, "Travels in Arabia Deserta" remained unpublished for many years. The atmosphere Doughty creates of his difficult, friendless, fearful wanderings is as remarkable as his minotely observed interpretation of the personality of the Bedouin is uni-

Under chapters headed Officers and Gentlemen, and The Last Adveoture, Breot brings his analysis up to our own day. He describes the journeys into Arabia and the writtings of Leachman, Bury, Lawrence and Philby, who were involved in the struggle for political and diplomatic influence in the region which preoccupied the European Powers and the Ottomans in the early 20th-

The Last Adventure, of course, was the crossing of the Empty Quarter in epic journeys made by Thomas, Philby and Thesiger. Here, perhaps, it was the unpoluted landscape and the preindustrial quiet which, as much as the fame, persuaded the travellers to try it. Brent argues that it was the discovery of oil and its exploitation which made the long sustained image of Romantic Arabia Fade. This view is poignantly proposed by Thesiger in "Arabian Sands" (1959).

Breot concludes this clever, Sympathetic and comprehensive book with a brief reference to the latest Saudi Five Year Plan, which shows how far developments have come. He suggests that the price the Bedouin had to pay for their freedom and code of honour, namely poverty, hardship, danger and sudden death, was far too high." Yet the wilderness vanishes and the ancient fortitude is eroded. The arenas shrink and vanish and the heroes, bereft, stumble into memory. Time, like a Saodstorm, obliterates their

...and promoting the Bee Gees biography

By Dennis Hunt
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif — Without stretching our imaginations too much, many of us can imagine what it's like to be a member of the Bee Gees. At the pinnacle of pop-music stardom there's good and bad. The good side is the money, fame, power and prestige. The bad side is the pressure to stay on top and the absence of privacy.

But it's probably not as easy to imagine what it's like being the parents of the Bee Gees. The way Hogh and Barbara Gibb tell it, they sample both good and bad. The senior Gibbs live in Miami Florida, near the Bee Gees (Barry, Maurice and Robin Gibb) and the youngest son, Andy, who is also a pop-music star.

"We don't live with the boys, but we do spend a lot of time with them," said Mrs. Gibb."

The senior Gibbs aren't flashy, hip or trendy. They seem like a typical English couple — friendly, low-key, chatty. The couple were in town briefly as part of a book promotion tourtheir sons are too busy to handle. The book is "The Bee Gees, the authorized biography of Barry, Robin and Maurice Gibb," by David Leaf (Delta Dell, $6.95). A fan-oriented, fact-filled, generously illustrated paperback, Mr. and Mrs. Gibb were supposed to be hawking the book. But the obviously unfamiliar book-promotion role was quickly pushed aside as they proceeded to be what they are - proud pareots who like to "They're not stuck-up stars, they're good boys," reported Mrs.

Gibb in one of her flurries of praise. "But I'm prejudiced, of course."

The Bee Gees' initial interest in music was inspired by their father, a former drummer and big-band leader. With his encouragement they were earnestly pursuing a pop music career in Australia by the time they were teenagers. After these crucial formative years 1958-67), Robert Stigwood ultimately discovered the brothers Gibb and turned them into stars.

The Gibbs' decision to leave England for Australia when the boys were young turned oot to be a brilliant one. The brothers had an opportunity to blossom musically that they might not have had in the bleak England of the late 50s.

"We left because of the weather and because we wanted a better life for the boys," Mrs. Gibb explained. "The twins (Maurice and Robin) were eight, Barry was 11 and Andy was just six months old."

"Australia was the the land of promise then," Gibb said. "The prospects in Eogland were terrible. I didn't want to see my family go down the drain." — (LAT)

Nelson birdies to beat Crenshaw for

OAK BROOK, Illinois, July 9 (AP) - Larry Nelson planted a nine-iron second shot two feet from the cup on the first extra hole and sank the putt for a birdie to defeat Ben Crenshaw and win the $300,000 Western Open golf tournament Sunday.

The victory was worth $54,000 to Nelson, who lost a playoff to Gil Morgan last week in the Memphis

Crenshaw's second shot landed about 60 feet from the hole and his putt missed by inches.

Nelson then tapped in for the triumph. Nelson and Crenshaw went into overtime after posting twounder-par 286s on the 7,097-yard par-72 Butler National Course. Nelson, who started the last round with a one stroke lead over Tom Watson, struggled in with a 39-37 traps, thickets and rough, came in with a 78, matching worst tournament round of the year. It left him at 289 with John Schroeder, who had a 67 Sunday for the best round of the day, Mark Hayes, who shot 71, and Jim Simons, who had 72.

Bruce Devlin, the 41-year-old Australian who lives in Houston, and obscure pro Dan Pohl, winner of less than $3,000 on the tour in the last two years, tied for second at 287.

Bruce Lietzke, with a closing 69, was at even-par 288.

Nelson's payoff boosted him to $235,097 and into second place behind Watson on the moneywinning list. He also qualified for the World Series of Golf as a double winner this season. Nelson won the Inverrary Classic in March — his first triumph since going on the tour in 1974.

Hinault comes up behind leader

BRUSSELS, July 9 (R) - Titleholder Bernard Hinanlt of France gained a full 35 seconds on overall leader Joop Zoetemelik despite a puncture in Sunday's 11th stage of the Tour de France cycle race here.

Hinault powered round the circuit, a 34.4 kilometer individual race against the clock, to climb back to within just over oneand-a-half minutes of the Dutch-

Hinault lost the overall leader's yellow jersey in Friday's exhausting stage from Amiens to Roubaix, over bone-jarring, cobbled roads, when he lost precious minutes because of two punctures

But Sunday's victory in the stage around the Belgian capital has again shown Hinault's flair and reserves of strength. Second in the time trial was Knut Knudsen of Norway and third was world champion Genie Knetemann of the Netherlands.

India rubbishes Leicester batsmen

July 9 (Agencies) - Leicestershire was shot ont for 81 Sunday, the third lowest total ever by an English county cricket team against India.

At one time, with the last pair together and just 47 runs on the board, an all-time low appeared possible. There was nothing on the credit side for the county, with eight wickets going down for 57 in 100 minutes. But better things came when it followed on 201 behind, and at 159 for 2, after a stand of 101 in 29

Somerset blasted 101 for two off 20 overs to win by a faster scoring rate. Richards' breezy innings included a six and three fours.

Kent moved into second place with a 19-run victory over Lancashire, thanks to an excellent performance from West Indian allrounder John Shepherd. ·

Shepherd hit 55 not out as Kent made 198 for six from their 40 overs, England prospect Christopher Tavare scoring a fine 85. Shepherd then grabbed three for 21 to clinch victory for Kent, who bowled Lancashire out for 179.

Alexis Arguello speared blooddrenched Bazooka Limon with right hands to the head and stopped the Mexican challenger in the 11th round to retain the World Boxing Council super featherweight championship at Madison Square Garden Sunday.

A doctor examined Limon after the eighth round and then referee Tony Perez called a halt at 1:40 of the 11th round after Arguello had landed about eight right bands to the head.

In the early rounds it was a real war, before the cuts made Limon fight a more defensive style.

California adopting new sense of shedding gas guzzling habits

LOS ANGELES, Joly 9 some smugness) the crisis had (OFNS) — California may finally be getting the message. To the surprise of the rest of the United States, this car-addicted state (16 million cars for 22 million people) is changing its gas guzzling habits.

Gov. Jerry Brown last week signed into law a $ 1 billion mass transit bill, and opened a program to use only "gasohol" in state-owned vehicles.

For Brown, who wants to be presideot in Jimmy Carter's place, California's new habit of conservation makes good political sense. But the rest of the state, including Brown's political opponents, seems to be getting oo the bandwagon as well.

It is conserving. It is turning to other modes of transport and seeking alternative fuels. It is trying hard to adapt to what one oil company chief recently called the end of the era of cheap energy."

Why, last week, had gasoline queues all but disappeared here. while (as Californians noted with spread throughout the East to New York? It was not because Californian supplies had increased, according to state energy chief Richard Maullin.

Nor was it a direct result (although that helped) of Brown s rationing scheme of fill-ups only on odd or even days, depending on the last number of licence plates. "Basically," said Maullin, "the situation eased because drivers made their own individual adjustments. One way or another, Throughout May and June gasolme usage was down 8 per cent over the same mooths last year, although there were more cars on the roads. Maullin is aiming at a permanent 10 per cent reduction and asking the major oil companies to help achieve it through media advertising.

How are driving patterns changing? "Fewer rides, shorter rides, more car-pooling, slower speeds, more use of public transport. says a state energy official.

Maltese finance minister resigns

VALLETTA, Malta, July 9 (R) - Maltese Fmance Minister Joseph Abela has resigned saying he is "fed np", Prime Minister Dom Mintoff announced Sunday night. Abela has been minister of finance, customs and people's investments since Mintoff's Labor Party gained power in 1971. Mintoff read Abela's letter of resignation to a mass meeting of the party and the General Workers Union. Abela said in the letter he had seen his dream of Malta riding itself of military occupation come true and that he was now "fed up," had "had enough" and was seeking a more peaceful life. He also resigned his parliamentary seat.

Whaling protesters rap Japanese

LONDON, July 9 (AP) — Fifty persons protesting Japanese involvement in whale hunting began an all-night vigil outside the Japanese Embassy here Sunday night after a rally in London's Trafalgar Square by 7,000 anti-whaling demonstrators. The demonstrators stood in one minute's silence for the ocean giants which they say are now in danger of extinction. They say Japan and the Soviet Union are the major culprits. The 7,000 demonstrators then heard a recording of the strange sounds made by whales as they swim together, which scientists call "songs." A giant blue balloon in the shape of a humpback whale bohbled across the square. The rally, held on a sultry day which drove some onlookers to paddlle in the fountains, came on the eve of the annual meeting in London of the International Whaling Commission. The IWC, a voluntary body of whaling and non-whaling nations, sets quotas of whales to be killed.

Consider this deal where South got to four spades and West led the K-A and another diamond. East ruffed, returned a trump, and declarer, after playing the A-Q of trumps, had to take the rest of the tricks to make the contract.

It might seem that the best line of play is to cash the K-Q-A of hearts, hoping the jack will drop. If it doesn't drop, declarer is then in a position to fall back on a club finesse. Had South elected to play the hand this way, he would have gone down one. But the actual declarer cleverly chose a different line of play. He reasoned that West was decidedly unlikely to have the king of clubs, because he would probably have bid two diamonds over one spade had he been dealt that card in addition to his excellent diamond suit. This was all the more likely, considering the vulnerability. Accordingly, at trick six, South led the queen of clubs, but went up with the ace after West followed low, Declarer then played two more rounds of trumps, ending in his hand and producing this position:

Now South played his last trump, discarding a club from dummy. At this stage of play East came to the conclusion that he would have been much better off if he had gone to the

FOR TUESDAY, JULY 10, 1979

What kind of day will tomorrow be? To find out what the stars say, read the forecast given for your birth Sign.

(Mar. 21 to Apr. 19)
You may feel frustrated in your work or concerned about a problem. Downplay ego not the time to force issues or to insist on own way.

(Apr. 20 to May 20) The accent is on patience. It may be too soon to act on advice re a child or dependent. Postpone decisions or business ventures. (May 21 to June 20)

Parental opposition or the caution of a superior may thwart plans. Be considerate of others with whom you share the same roof.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your caution makes you hesitant to go along with a partner's plan. Your uncertainty spills over into the area of joint finances.

(July 23 to Aug. 22) N (T) Make sure your financial situation measures up to social plans. You could be going in over your head. Avoid friction with triends.

VIRG0 VIRGO (Ang. 23 to Sept. 22) Your reluctance to go along with a superior's thinking could be misinterpreted as insubordination. Forego a tendency to criticize. LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) The opposition of others may require that you consider their viewpoints before planning a trip. Mixing social life and business dulls perceptivity. SCORPIO 加米 (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Not a time to ask friends for favors, especially financial ones. Unrealistic thinking mars travel plans. Be skeptical of bargains. SAGITTARIUS SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)

Business affairs requiring cooperation at a standstill. Avoid signing papers — the picture is too muddled for clear decisions. (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) CAPRICORN Attend to duty, superiors are liable to be in a critical mood. Avoid carelessness with either possessions or cash. Don't misplace things. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) A secret plan may have to be scratched. Too much aggressiveness in a romantic situation could lead to a rebuff. Cool it. (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20) Others may not go along with your ideas for having fun.

On your own, you could easily lapse into indiscretion.

Questions and answers

What happens when Skylab falls

- With Skylab about to shower our planet with 20 to 25 tons debris, a lot of questions are being asked about the big space station and wby it is coming down.

Here are the ones most frequently asked: When is Skylab most likely to hit the earth? The North American Air Defense Command (NORAD), which is tracking the station, in its latest prediction says it will fall from orbit in a 30-bour period between 2328 GMT Tuesday and 0528 GMT Thursday, with Wednesday the probable day.

Where will it hit? NORAD can't predict right now because of such factors as variations in the gravitational pull of land masses and oceans, solar flares and atmospheric friction, all of which influence Skylab's orbital path. Two bours before the expected plunge, NORAD will make its final forecast, but even that will only be 20 per cent accurate - meaning the re-entry could occur 25 minutes on either side of that time. The station can travel more than half way around the world in that 50-minute period. How much does Skylab weigh and bow much of it will strike the

The station weighed 85 tons when it first went into orbit. But the loss of some equipment and the depletion of control fuel has cut this to 77.5 tons. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration says most of the craft will burn up from atmospheric friction, but it expects about 500 pieces weighing a total of between 20 and 25 tons to survive and reach the earth.

How big are those pieces which will survive? They will range from one pound to 21/2 tons. Most will be under 10 pounds, but NASA predicts that 10 pieces weighing more than 1,000 pounds each will make Skylab pass over? It passes over all areas of the globe between 50 degrees north latitude and 50 degrees south latitude. If NORAD's late predictions indicate Skylab might fall on a path that would take it over heavily-populated areas - such as a pass over Europe, India and China - NASA might elect to send commands to the station's nitrogen gas thrusters, tilting it slightly to increase atmospheric drag. This could delay the re-entry several hours. It would be done only if it would bring Skylab down on a path with lower population. How will NASA alert people that Skylab is falling?

.NASA plans to keep the news media fully informed and has set up a press room near the Skylab coordination ceoter in its . Washington, D.C. headquarters. When NORAD makes its final two-bour prediction, the agency will report on what cities might be affected in that 50-minute span do for protection? Keep an eye on the sky and if you see falling debris, get out of its way or seek shelter. NASA says that people in buildings, houses or automobiles would be safe from most of the parts expected to hit the earth. Officials caution that actions to seek shelter may be more hazardous than the chance of injury from Skylab. # Carter policy review continues

WASHINGTON, July 9 (AP) - President Jimmy Carter is moving from a broad-brush review of the domestic problems that have dogged his administration to a close-up look at the nation's energy pinch and an economy seemingly sliding into recession.

Voyager explores Jupiter moons

طالاته ۱۲ شعبان ۱۳۹۹ هـ

PASADENA, California, July 9 (AP) — The space probe Voyager 2 Monday is making its closest approaches to the giant planet Jupiter and the least known of its four major moons.

The U.S. spacecraft was scheduled to get a good look at the moon Europa before a swing past Jupiter at 1120 gmt. Europa is expected to be the star of the Voyager 2 trip because it is the one major moon that Voyager 1 did not get a good look at juring its visit three months ago.

" Europa is the object we know least about and that's where the most surprises may come from." project scientist Edward Stone predicted. "That's the missing link in our knowledge of Jupiter's On Sunday, Voyager 2 examined the moon Callisto and found many bright red craters the smallest measuring 12 to 16 kilometers across. Different colors on Callisto's surface led scientists to speculate that areas appearing blue could be ice. Other new photographs showed that the band on Jupiter containing the buge red spot is becoming lighter, suggesting that atmospheric material such as highaltitude clouds may be increasing.

Sunday's photographs also indicated that the ring around Jupiter is probably quite narrow, more like the ring around Uranus than that of Saturn. Scientists said the ring is at least as thin as the 29kilometer estimate based on Voyager 1 data and could be much

LONDON, July 9 (AP) - After a boy's teachers confessed they could oot teach him to spell, British psychologists used candies as rewards and transformed him into a child who can spell as well as any of his classmates, a leading British psychologist reported Sunday.

The scheme was simple: The boy got a candy every time he wrote a certain number of words correctly, said Professor Hans Eysenck,

He said the child was referred to psychologists after many teachers had tried and failed to overcome his spelling inability. Eysenck gave these further details:

An apparatus" for the dispensing of positive reinforcement" was constructed, consisting of a hollow column filled with candies the boy liked - candies with chocolate centers under brightly colored coat-

The apparatus included five white light bulbs topped by a red one. The child was given words to spell, and each time he spelled one correctly, a light would go on until finally the red light would come on - and a candy would descend the chute and be grabbed and eaten by
